

FINE FOR INDIANS! THEY'RE SAFE NOW, RAYMOND QUILTS

Judge Preserves Poor Apaches
From Boy Slayer, Who Goes Back Home.

Thirteen-year-old Raymond Towne of No. 27 Bennett street, Worcester, Mass., wound up his adventures in New York in the Children's Court in Brooklyn today and was sent home by order of Justice Ryan.

Raymond ran away from home early in October. He stole $25 and a gold watch from his mother, and it was his intention to travel across the continent until he reached the "wild and woolly" West. Leo Brown, an older boy, who lived next door to him, put the idea into his head, he said, and also urged him to steal the wherewithal to start the journey. Their plan was to come to New York, get employment and save enough money to take them to Chicago. From Chicago they would work their way to Denver and thence into Arizona, where they would engage in mortal combat with the Apache.

When Leo and Raymond got to New York, Leo was custodian of the funds. He got Raymond a job with Mills & Gibbs on Broadway, and for two weeks dispersed Raymond's salary. Then one day Leo "blew."

Raymond, however, stuck to his job and made good. He won the confidence of his employers and got a raise of salary. When the police at last got on the trail of the runaway, they got nothing but good reports of him. His employers wrote a letter to Justice Ryan and also to Raymond's parents, asking that he be allowed, after the Christmas holidays, to come back to New York and return to his job.

The Court lectured Raymond and also praised him for making good at his job. Then Raymond was put on the train and started in the direction of home.

More Repeal Bills.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Bills to repeal the act creating the Commerce Court and to repeal the Canadian reciprocity act continue to be filed in the House. Representative Helgeson of North Dakota has added to the number of Commerce Court bills, and another Canadian reciprocity bill has been introduced by Representative Mott of New York.

MORE FUN COMING.
If you spend, as you can, an hour of mirth, reading, laughing, and fun, this is the place to go. The 16-page "Fun Book" is now on sale with the great Sunday World. You will surely watch for the other "Fun Book" to be given with The World next Sunday.

EYES PROVEN SUPERFLUOUS AT BLIND BAZAAR

Skelly, the blind checker player, is meeting all comers at the Lighthouse, at No. 118 West Fifty-ninth street, this afternoon, to-night, to-morrow afternoon and to-morrow night. Two games at a time furnish Skelly with pastime, and the better the opposing players the more pastime for Skelly.

Skelly is but one feature of the annual bazaar of the blind workers of New York. The Lighthouse is the clearing house of these cheerful souls, shut out from enjoyment of the sense of sight, that have surmounted the difficulties of their position and made themselves self-supporting.

Hand men and women show, at the Lighthouse, how skilfully and well they can do almost anything in the way of handicraft. Naturally, weaving, knitting and sewing are the exertions of most of them. No shop in the city can show more desirable pieces of workmanship than the bazaar.

Everything on sale has been fashioned by fingers guided only by the sense of touch and the mysterious sixth sense which nature grants to the unfortunate deprived of their sight. Visitors to the bazaar are not only comforted by a bewildering array of articles for sale, but are enticed by an appetizing display of cakes, pies, sandwiches, coffee and other eatables, all the work of blind cooks.

Up-to-date in every particular, with a blind stenographer and a blind telephone operator, the Lighthouse exhibition has also a blind wireless telegraph operator and a wireless telegraph station. John Elsie, nineteen years old, is the operator. He installed the wireless station himself, with the aid of another blind pupil. Early Christmas shopping and aiding a good cause is a combination that can be worked out by attending the bazaar at the Lighthouse.

IN HUDDERSFIELD, ENGLAND, WHERE MARTIN'S GOODS ARE MADE, they produce the finest worsteds in the world. They use nothing but full and half-blood long Australian stock, and the principal machinery used there is American made.

In America we use the same machinery, import their labor, use the same blooded stock yarns, but it is not possible to get same colorings or finish. Something in the air and water of that country is especially adapted to the dyeing and finish of fine worsteds, and, I contend, when I advertise Martin's Worsteds made in Huddersfield, England, I am giving you the last word in Cloth, as these are the finest money can produce.

The Martin account is open only to a few of the importers in this country, as it is considered an exclusive account, and when an importer came to me and sold me a raft of these goods at my price, I insisted on the original tickets being left on. That is the condition under which I do business with you, Mr. Reader. Inside my door I will have lined up a table full of the different styles of Martin's English Worsteds, the cheapest yard of which would cost at least $4.50, and from that price to $8.00 for their overcoatings, which I have included in this stock.

Now, when I made my initial bow in this city, some six weeks ago, I was unheard of. I came here with a blare of trumpets because I wanted you to know me. I have taken orders in these six weeks for over three thousand suits and overcoats. It has been my extreme pleasure to have a number of the first customers back for the second and third order, and I can assure every man who calls that if you buy Martin's Worsteds from me at a price of $15.00, the linings, buttons and all findings of the suit will match the general color and the garment will be made in my own workshop under my personal supervision. Your order is taken with the understanding that the fit is satisfactory to you or new garment to be made.

This line of goods is composed of all the quiet, conservative shades, nothing flashy or fancy, and I would be pleased to have the many skeptical readers of this paper call and examine this stock whether you intend to buy or not.

Signed, MITCHELL THE TAILOR.

To the ladies I will sell these goods by the yard, and, believe me, you will like these quite tasty patterns.

A Shovelful of Gold Buys a Ton of Martin's Fine English Worsteds

I BUY FOR SPOT CASH A TEAM LOAD OF MARTIN'S FINE ENGLISH WORSTEDS from New England's largest importer, and I would be pleased to have the public of New York call and inspect the same.

Suit or Overcoat to Order, $15.00

Before the advent of the Sherman Trust Law every high grade mill in America had a guaranteed price on their woollens, which they have discontinued since the legal troubles between the United States Government and the trusts, and this selfsame importer closes out to me a line of American woollens second to none, and includes the following makers: Kuhnhardts, Hockanums, Mabbitts and Standish. These goods are the finest America can produce, and my impression is that many persons bought these from the selfsame importer as foreigners.

The fact that I have these goods does not take away from them their quality. They were sold to me and guaranteed fresh and clean and this season's stock. In fact, a great number of them are next Spring's goods, 12 and 14 oz. in weight.

My price for the American goods will be
